Chester Drawers was Billy's best friend.
Although made of wood, he could feel.
Billy confided in Chester.
Their great friendship WAS the real deal!

The bullies Kept torturing Billy,
No matter how hard Billy tried.

Now the school celebrates the changes.
All are happy to hear the bell ring!

And every time there's a concert,
Hark and Harold, the angels, sing!

CHESTER DRAWERS came to life because of my childhood memories of a friend made of wood. While I was a child learning the concept of trusting, I knew that I could trust Chester, that he would listen and that he probably would be a permanent figure in my life. My bedroom was my safe place and Chester Drawers (I didn't know it was really chest-of-drawers) was there and always available.

Now that I am an adult, I think about how difficult life is for children these days; so much more difficult and complicated than when I was a child. So, my hope is that my Chester books will speak to children who need to know they are not alone and that somebody cares.

Thanks go to my beloved husband, David, who wholeheartedly supported me and worked for hours on the layout and details; to my brother, Robin, who encouraged me to publish; to Char, my wonderful illustrator; and to my faithful friends who always believed in me.

CHESTER DRAWERS (on bullying)

Chester was worried about Billy because of bullies at Billy's school. Billy was very afraid until two new kids, Hark and Harold, came to his school. They were big and strong and very protective of Billy. But, then came the scary day when Hark and Harold weren't around.

Chester's advice about how to handle the bullies was invaluable to Billy and to all the children at Billy's school. Everybody learned the importance of The Golden Rule and living in harmony with one another.

Join Chester in his next adventure with Billy in Chester Drawers (on moving and friendship).

Risë and David Singer are retired and now enjoying developing their artistic gifts (Risë a singer and writer and David a wood carver). They live in Frostproof, Florida.
