Washington, DC (July 1, 2024) – MVP Protective Services, an African American owned, Washington, D.C based security company, announced today the launch of a new program at the BMW Performance Driving Centers in Spartanburg, SC and Thermal, CA to train and develop executive protection professionals in emergency vehicle operations for high-profile clients.

Students at the MVP School of Executive Protection will not only gain access to BMW’s cutting-edge facilities and vehicles, but the classes will be taught by company’s expert driving instructors as well. This exclusive program will train students in advanced driving techniques, situational awareness, and critical decision-making skills, ensuring their driving skills are at the forefront of the industry.

“As a black man, I am speechless. Never in a million years would I have thought that this would be possible. Yet, I sit here with a signed agreement to host my training in collaboration with BMW, one of the greatest car companies in the world. I am honored that BMW saw the value MVP brings to the executive security industry and agreed to do business with us,” said Melvin Key, Founder and CEO at MVP Protective Services. Key added: "Our mission is to prioritize client safety. We can only do that by ensuring our graduates are trained at the highest level and with the best equipment. I couldn’t have found a better partner to do that with than BMW.”

As one of the world's leading minority-owned executive protection companies, and the only known Black-owned executive security driving school in the world, MVP Protective Services marks a significant milestone in the pursuit of excellence in security services.

MVP’s first emergency vehicle operations class is scheduled to start in October 2024 at the BMW Performance Driving Center in Spartanburg, South Carolina.
